A note from Cole

Read it however suits you. If you only have 5 minutes, skip to Chapter 3 — those three mistakes are where most Texas homeowners lose money.

What makes this different

Most roofing guides are sales pitches in disguise. This one's a checklist. Use it. Share it. Hire us only if it makes sense.

WHY WE WROTE THIS

Because we saw it happen too many times.

After the May 2024 hailstorm, we walked 47 roofs in 30 days. The ones who came out ahead all did the same things — file fast, document well, get a contractor in the room with the adjuster. This guide is those lessons.

01

CHAPTER 1

Why This Matters

In May 2024, hail flattened parts of Cedar Park, Round Rock, and Pflugerville. We walked 47 roofs in 30 days. We watched homeowners lose money they didn't need to lose.

72%

of hail claims in TX are underpaid by adjusters on the first estimate

$6,800

avg. extra recovered when a roofer walks the adjuster on-site

365 days

after the storm — then your insurer can legally deny the claim

This isn't because Texans don't have coverage — they do. The problem is procedural: they miss deadlines, document damage wrong, accept the first adjuster estimate without question, and try to DIY the temporary fixes themselves. Every one of those mistakes voids legitimate claims.

This guide is built from 14 years on Texas roofs. No upsell. If you finish it and conclude your roof is fine, that's a great outcome. If you finish it and realize you've been sitting on damage you didn't know about — also great, because you still have time to act.

If you suspect damage, file the claim. You can always withdraw it. You can never recover from missing the deadline.

— COLE BISHOP

FROM THE FIELD · MAY 2024

We walked one Round Rock roof three times in one week.

The first adjuster came back with a $4,200 estimate. We pointed out cracked decking he missed. Second walk came back at $11,800. Third walk after code-upgrade requirements were added: $18,400. Same roof. Three numbers. The homeowner didn't say anything different — we just kept showing up.

02

CHAPTER 2

How to Spot Hail Damage

You don't need to climb on your roof. Most hail damage is visible from the ground, your driveway, or your attic. Here's what to look for.

From the ground (10 minutes)

- Dents in metal vents, gutters, AC condensers
- Granules in the gutter or downspout exits
- Bruised, soft, or sponge-like shingles
- Cracked, split, or visibly missing shingles
- Dented siding or chipped paint on south/west
- Damaged window screens or torn flashing

In the attic (10 minutes)

- Wet stains on rafters or insulation
- Visible daylight through the deck
- New mildew smell after a storm
- Saggy spots in the ceiling drywall
- Brown ring stains spreading on the ceiling
- Damp insulation directly under the roof

RULE OF THUMB

If the metal on your house is dented — your shingles are too.

Hail hits everything: vents, gutters, AC unit, mailbox, car. If you can spot dents on any of those, you can stop guessing about the roof. It got hit.

A 10-MINUTE TEST

Walk your driveway. Look at the AC condenser.

If the metal fins on your AC unit are bent or dented, hail hit hard enough to damage shingles. Same goes for car hoods, mailboxes, and gutter ends. If those are dented and you haven't checked your roof yet — that's your sign to schedule an inspection.

03

CHAPTER 3

3 Mistakes That Get Claims Denied

Every storm season the same three mistakes torpedo legitimate claims. Avoid these and you keep your payout.

01

Waiting too long to file.

You have ONE YEAR from the storm date to file a property damage claim in Texas. After that, insurers can deny on procedural grounds alone — regardless of whether your damage is legitimate. I've watched families lose $15K+ payouts because they "didn't want to bother the insurance company." If you suspect damage, file the claim. You can always withdraw it. You can never recover from missing the deadline.

→ What to do instead

If a hail storm hit your area in the last 12 months and you haven't filed yet, file this week. The insurer's response will tell you if you have a real claim.

02

Doing temporary repairs yourself.

There's a tarp situation, water's leaking, you want to act fast. But if you climb up and slip, fall, or make it worse, you've voided the claim. And if you cover the damage with a DIY patch, the adjuster can't document the original damage properly. Call a licensed roofer for the temporary fix.

→ What to do instead

We charge nothing for emergency tarping if you're filing an insurance claim through us. Call (512) 487-3204. We'll be there within 4 hours.

BEFORE YOU TURN THE PAGE

Mistake #3 is on the next page — and it's the most expensive.

We've watched homeowners accept first-adjuster estimates that were $8,000–$15,000 short of actual replacement cost. The fix takes one phone call. Turn the page.

CHAPTER 3 · CONTINUED

03

Accepting the first adjuster estimate.

Insurance adjusters are not roofers. They miss damage. They under-estimate replacement cost. They lowball materials. They're working from a checklist, often without climbing the roof. The first estimate is the opening offer, not the final number.

The fix: have a licensed roofer walk the adjuster on-site. Together. Travis does this on every Crestline claim. We recover an average of $6,800 extra per job by catching what the adjuster missed. Cracked decking. Hidden flashing damage. Code-upgrade requirements. Items adjusters routinely overlook.

→ What to do instead

Tell your adjuster you want to schedule a joint walk-through with your roofer. Most adjusters say yes. It's the single highest-ROI thing you can do during a claim.

A REAL EXAMPLE

Pflugerville, August 2024: first estimate was $9,400. Final payout was $24,700.

The adjuster's first walk missed cracked decking, code-upgrade requirements, and gutter damage. Travis caught all three on the joint walk-through. That's a $15,300 swing on one claim — and the only thing the homeowner did was ask for a joint inspection.

Insurance is a negotiation. The first estimate is an opening offer. Negotiate it.

— RULE OF THUMB

04

CHAPTER 4

What Insurance Actually Pays For

If you have a standard Texas homeowner's policy with wind/hail coverage, a covered storm event typically pays for the full system — not just the parts they want to.

✓ COVERED

- Full shingle replacement (not just repair)
- Underlayment, flashing, and ridge cap
- Damaged roof decking
- Gutters, downspouts, and fascia
- Required building code upgrades
- Permits, debris removal, dumpster

✗ TYPICALLY EXCLUDED

- Cosmetic-only damage (some policies)
- Wear and tear or aging shingles
- Pre-existing damage from prior storms
- Damage you caused doing DIY repairs
- Damage outside the policy term
- Negligence (neglected maintenance)

TWO ACRONYMS TO KNOW

RCV — Replacement Cost Value

Pays the full cost of new materials and labor today. If your roof costs $20K to replace, you get $20K (minus deductible). This is what you want.

ACV — Actual Cash Value

Pays the depreciated value. Same $20K roof might only get you $12K because the policy factors in age. Always ask your insurer which one your policy has — the difference is huge.

05

CHAPTER 5 The 1-Year Filing Deadline

Texas law gives you exactly one year from the storm date to file a property damage claim. After that, insurers can deny on procedural grounds alone.

365
DAYS, MAX

The clock starts on the storm date — not when you discover the damage. This trips up homeowners.

You don't see the problem until your ceiling leaks 8 months later. By then you have 4 months to file, prove the cause, and start repairs. Don't put yourself in that spot.

RECOMMENDED TIMELINE AFTER A STORM

● Storm hits	Day 0	Mark the date on your calendar.
● Look for damage	Day 1–7	Ground-level check + attic. 10 min total.
● Get free inspection	Day 7–14	Drone photos and a written 2–3 page report.
● File the claim	Day 14–30	Don't wait. You can withdraw later if needed.
● Adjuster on-site	Day 30–60	Have your roofer walk the roof WITH them.
● Work begins	Day 45–90	Permits, materials, install. 1–2 days on roof.
● Final inspection	Day 90+	Sign-off, warranty paperwork, payment closed.

WHAT MISSING THE DEADLINE COSTS

One missed deadline = $0 payout, no exceptions.

Texas insurers enforce the 1-year rule strictly. We saw a Cedar Park family lose a $22,000 hail claim because they filed at day 367. Their damage was real. Documentation was solid. The clock had run out. If you're at month 10 and uncertain — file now. You can always close the claim. You can't restart the clock.

06

CHAPTER 6

When to DIY vs Hire a Pro

Some roofing work is fine to handle yourself. Most isn't. Here's the clear line so you don't void a claim or break a leg.

✓ OK TO DIY

- Ground-level visual check
- Attic inspection with flashlight
- Photo documentation
- Calling your insurer to file
- Clearing leaves from gutters
- Replacing 1–2 individual shingles

✗ HIRE A PRO

- Anything requiring you on the roof
- Temporary tarping or emergency patch
- Insurance adjuster walk-through
- Full or partial roof replacement
- Damage assessment for claims
- Code upgrades & permit pulls

The biggest DIY mistake

Climbing on your roof for a “quick look.” Most insurance liability policies don't cover you up there. One slip and the medical bills will dwarf the storm claim. Stay on the ground.

If you can solve it from the ground with a phone and a flashlight, do it yourself. Anything above 8 feet, hire it out.

— SAFER RULE

THE HIDDEN COST OF DIY

ER visits average $3,200. Roof falls are the #2 home injury in Texas.

We've seen homeowners with $14K hail claims that turned into $35K medical bills after a fall — and the insurance company refused both because the DIY repair voided coverage. The 30 minutes we'd take to tarp your roof for free saves you all of that.

CHAPTER 7

What a Crestline Inspection Looks Like

Free. 48-hour turnaround. No sales pitch. Five steps from your first call to a written report in your inbox.

You call or submit the form

We answer Mon–Sat 7am–7pm Central. Voicemails get returned within 30 minutes during business hours.

We schedule within 48 hours

We text you a 2-hour arrival window. You don't need to be home for the roof inspection itself — just available by phone.

Travis is on the roof 30–60 minutes

He takes 30–50 photos with a phone and drone. He checks ground-level signs, gutters, attic, and the deck under shingles.

You get a written report in 24 hours

2–3 page PDF with photos, damage description, and a written quote for repair or replacement. You keep the report either way.

You decide what's next

File a claim, schedule the work, or do nothing. We follow up once. If you say no, we stop calling.

WHAT YOU GET EITHER WAY

The 2–3 page inspection report is yours to keep.

Whether you hire us, file a claim with someone else, or do nothing — you walk away with 30–50 drone photos, a written damage assessment, and a price estimate. Use it however helps you. Half our customers shop the report against other contractors. We're fine with that.

08

CHAPTER 8

Frequently Asked Questions

Six questions every Texas homeowner asks after a storm. Straight answers, no fluff.

Q. Is the inspection really free?

A. Yes. The report is yours whether you hire us or not. Half our jobs come from referrals — the report is our marketing.

Q. What if my insurance denies the claim?

A. We help you appeal. About 1 in 5 denials gets overturned with a contractor's report attached. If it sticks, we offer cash pricing 20–30% below typical insurance rates.

Q. Do you handle the insurance paperwork?

A. Yes. Travis meets the adjuster on-site, documents what they missed, and works directly with your insurer's claims department.

Q. How long does the actual install take?

A. For a typical 2,500 sq ft Texas home: 1 day on the roof. Cleanup the next day. Full warranty paperwork within a week.

Q. What warranty do you offer?

A. 25-year manufacturer warranty (GAF Master Elite). 10-year workmanship from us. Transferable if you sell the house.

Q. Do I have to use you to file?

A. No. Hire anyone. Just compare apples to apples — same materials, same warranty, same scope. Some roofers underbid by cutting code-required items.

STILL HAVE QUESTIONS?

Reply to any email from us with your question.

Cole and Travis personally read every email. We typically reply within 2 business hours, Monday through Saturday. No call center, no chatbot, no auto-reply that says 'thanks, we'll get back to you.' Just one of us, on a phone, in Cedar Park.

This is a demo. Crestline is fictional.

Crestline Roofing & Exteriors isn't a real roofing company. This 12-page PDF guide, the website at bishoproofing.com, the 3-email nurture sequence that delivered it, and the GoHighLevel workflow that fires when someone downloads it — they were all built end-to-end by Joshua Solomon as a portfolio piece.

Everything you just read — the cover, the 12-page layout, the brand voice, the workflow architecture, the email templates, the landing page — represents the kind of complete marketing system Joshua ships to retainer clients.
